Defining Reactive Attachment Disorder

Do you know a young person who:

- `Lies for no apparent reason.
- `Has abnormal speech patters and is uninterested in learning communication skills .
- `Sneaks things without permission even if the thing could be had by simply asking first.
- `Is demanding or clingy, often at inappropriate times.
- `Argumentative, frequent tantrums or rage, often over trivial or insignificant issues.

These and many others are all signs and symptoms of reactive attachment disorder (RAD) the causes of which can occur to a child usually starting under the age of 36 months who sustains:

- `Abuse (physical, emotional, sexual).
- `Neglect
- `Sudden separation from primary caregiver (i.e. illness or death of mother or severe illness/hospitalization of child)
- `Undiagnosed or painful illness such as colic or ear infections
- `Inconsistent or inadequate day care
- `Chronic maternal depression
- `Several moves or placements (foster care, failed adoptions)
- `Unprepared mothers with poor parenting skills

Reactive Attachment Disorder (RAD) is a mental disorder which starts in infancy or early childhood and is biologically based and ranges in symptoms from mild to severe. Symptoms include: oppositional behavior, poor eye contact, defiance, pathological lying, inability/refusal to be comforted, sabotaging, constant talking, manipulative behavior, and fear of intimacy. Children who have attachment disorder may also have concurrent depression, anxiety, trauma/PTSD and attention deficits (ADD/ADHD) or other mental illnesses. RAD is a condition which prevents the individual from forming loving lasting relationships and often lack the ability to be genuinely affectionate with others; they typically fail to develop a conscience and do not learn to trust. In all but the most severe cases, the symptoms of attachment disorder occur mostly at home with the primary caregivers. While the rest of the world (school, neighbors, families) often sees a charming, talkative, engaging child, the parent is typically the recipient of the child's most hostile and aggressive behavior. Standard parenting techniques do not work with children with attachment issues; they do not think and feel like a normal person. It is important for parents dealing with a child with attachment disorder to get professional help as soon as possible.

Special Workshop

Instructor Nancy Thomas: Mother, grandmother, adoptive mom and foster mom, has worked as a Therapeutic Parenting specialist with children who had Attachment Disorder, RAD, PTSD, Aspergers, ritualistic abuse, ADD, ADHD, ODD, Tourette's syndrome and Bipolar Disorder. She has shared her life and home for over 35 years with severely emotionally disturbed children. She has an 85% success rate with these high-risk children, which is one of the highest in the country. An author and educator specializing in bonding and conscience development, she has trained over 50,000 parents and professionals throughout the world with her effective methods. This will be Nancy's first time in Alaska. The workshop will be May 12, 2012, "Rebuilding the Broken Bond". Registration required.

RAVEN RESPITE PROJECT

If you would like to participate in the RAVEN Respite project call 907-376-0366.

There are a few providers that are trained in the care of Attachment Disorder children. The families need to submit all their paper work and attend the respite training workshop, to receive some assistance with the cost of the care from AABA. AABA has two families using this program. AABA can assist two more families. 907-376-0366

A WORD FROM OUR CEO/PRESIDENT

AABA would like to invite volunteers to help with and create new fundraising events. If you are interested please email laura@akattachment.org or call 907-376-0366. Community involvement is key to a successful event that would help these emotional at-risk children and their parents deal with emotional issues, such as Attachment Disorder or Reactive Attachment Disorder.

Thank you, and have a great summer.
