Hallmark Behavior Problems of Foster and Adopted Children

Foster and adopted children with multiple negative impacts often show behavior problems. And behavior problems are one of the chief reasons that foster and adoptive placements flounder or even fail. Listed below are most frequent behavior problems reported by foster/adoptive parents:

- Lying and manipulation
- Defiance and disrespect
- Verbal and/or physical aggression
- Violation of family norms
- Tantrums
- Destruction of property
- Stealing
- Hyperactivity
- Curfew violation
- Running away
- Sexual acting out and sexual aggression
- Arrests and legal difficulties
- Suicidal behavior Fire-setting

The most prevalent problem behaviors reported by foster/adoptive parents are lying and manipulation. A close second is defiance and disrespect, which can be a “hot button” for many parents. All of the behavior problems listed above, except suicidal behavior, are classified as “externalizing” because they are directed outward (at others) and are observable. Verbal and physical aggression, for instance, are both externalizing problems because they hurt other people. Stealing, which deprives someone of a rightful possession, is also an externalizing behavior because it victimizes others. Defiance and disrespect are often “in your face” forms of misbehavior that are aimed at other individuals (often

Activity for Attachment Kids

"After School Activity for Attachment Disorder Kids & Teens 5-16

Head, Heart & Tails, in cooperation with Alaska Assistance Dogs and Alaska Attachment & Bonding Associates (AABA), will continue its therapeutic service dog training program for kids and teens with their parent or caregiver. This fun program addresses the following core needs: It helps children learn to bond with a parent or caregiver, to regulate emotions, to develop a sense of teamwork, and to experience healthy loving, touching, and hugging. The focus is to help the child or teen develop a better bond with their parent/caregiver as both learn and then teach commands to their dog; usually Golden Retrievers, Standard Poodles or Labrador Retrievers. Teams can train learn and train any of the 65 commands a service dog learns! The win-win aspect of this program is that the parent-child teams help train service dogs for Alaskans with disabilities and become contributing members to their community.

Following a summer break, the program will resume for three 5-week sessions, held once a week on Tuesdays from 4:30 – 5:30 pm. Start dates are August 6, September 24 and November 12. Class size will be 4 – 5 trainers. A parent or caregiver must attend with their child. There is no cost to the families. Training locations will vary, but all begin at the Mat-Su Animal Shelter (training room) off 49th State Street in Palmer. If you are interested or would like more information, please call Laura at 907-376-0366 or Carole as listed below.

Extreme Family Makeovers

Nancy Thomas has an Extreme Family makeover program, where she comes to your home. Just think you would have one on one time and training with Nancy in your own home environment, this will help Nancy find out what kind difficulties you are having and help you with the problems.

This program is designed to help families to connect and help challenging children (up to 12 years of age) to redirect their paths at home. The focus of this program is to renew, recharge, and empower each parent with effective techniques to decrease their child's aggression and destruction, while increasing love and laughter in their homes. This is achieved through a powerful in-home program with daily skill building and parenting interventions to build the child's trust, honesty, self-control and conscience development. Nancy's program has been developed on over 30 years of success working with violent, defiant, destructive children. These children can learn to be respectful, responsible and fun to be with. The cost is less than an intensive one on one at Nancy's Colorado Ranch. Plus you do not have to buy plane tickets, rent a room, buy food, or rent a car.

The cost and days vary with the size of your family.

Families of four or less: Three day makeover is $4850.

Families of five or six: Four day makeover is $6450.

Families of seven or more: Five day makeover is about $8050.

Please contact Bandy or Shaye (1-970-984-2222) for available dates and registration. Leave a message and they will call you back.

Authority figures) and are difficult to ignore. Externalizing behavior problems are most often associated with placement struggles and disruptions.

You may find, in noting the above behavior problems, that your foster or adopted children show some or even all of these problems. If so, you may be interested in and benefit from a better understanding of what such behaviors stem from.

When problem behaviors appear, most foster and adoptive parents raise two main questions:

1. Why does my child act this way?
2. How soon will he/she stop?

The first question sends us looking for causes, reasons or underlying issues related to behavior problems. The second question speaks to the urgent need for change. Knowledge of the patterns and underlying issues helps us to understand causes and design interventions that promote change.

Once we have figured out the behavior pattern, we are half way there. We understand “how” this behavior came about, but we still need to know “why” the behavior problem occurred. This second question (“why”) targets the causes of, reasons for, or underlying issues behind the behavior. Understanding causes and issues allow us to address them with psychosocial interventions and treatment plans. In a very general way behavior problems are caused by or derived from multiple negative impacts (e.g, genetic defects, prenatal exposure to toxins, trauma, etc.) that have beset many foster and adopted children. But getting to more specific causes takes some digging, which often uncovers underlying issues.

Causes arise from nature and nurture: The big picture is that biological, social and psychological factors mix and mingle and multiply, thus producing behavior problems. This is pretty straight forward cause and effect, but it fails to furnish specific information that would guide the development of interventions and treatment plans. This is where the identification of underlying issues comes to the rescue.

A growing body of research has pinpointed eight underlying issues related to behavior problems:

- Low self-esteem and a negative self-image
- Difficulty understanding (and complying with) rules
- Problems with keeping emotions in check
- Difficulty labeling and verbalizing feelings and needs
- Distrust and lack of expectation of protection by others
- Inaccurate reading of other’s feelings and interpersonal situations
- Below-average mental flexibility and verbal fluency
- Poor planning and reasoning

Please note that some of these issues are biological and others are psychological. While perceptions and conclusions are a part of who children are at any given moment in time, the underlying issues are a more permanent fixture of children’s personalities. As such , underlying issues are frustratingly slow to change even under ideal conditions. This may explain why the term benefits of foster and adoptive care are more like harvesting wood

From a grove of trees that was planted long ago than picking vegetables from this season's garden. The most enduring benefits of foster and adoptive care are usually born out of a long term commitment to these children.

Foster and adoptive parents can benefit from knowing what issues are going on inside their children. Knowing what the issues are ultimately aids foster parents in intervening in helpful ways.

Summary

The psychological dimension provides understanding of children's thoughts, feelings and actions. Broadly speaking, foster and adopted children's behavior problems relate to the multiple negative impacts they have suffered.

More specifically, problem behaviors have meaning, which often relates to early caregiver relationships and the family from which children come. Foster and adopted children often develop a style of engaging that was adaptive in their dysfunctional family but is maladaptive in a good foster or adoptive home. Behavior problems can often be understood and addressed if we examine their related patterns and underlying issues. If the child's thoughts and feelings about himself and the world around him can be understood through a correct interpretation of his behaviors, then we have taken a big step in the direction of helping him.

About Alaska Attachment & Bonding Associates

AABA is a non-profit organization that provides education, training, support and advocacy for kinship, adoptive and foster families who care for children with emotional disorders, such as Reactive Attachment Disorder (RAD) and professionals who work with this population of children.

AABA's area of Focus:

- PREVENTION of abuse/neglect
- PLACEMENT information
- EDUCATION in Attachment
- COMMUNITY resource information

WHAT drives AABA?

AABA is passionate about traumatized children.

AABA has first hand experience with Attachment Disorder children and knows the Special care and treatment needed to help these children learn, love and trust.

Left untreated, children with Attachment Disorder and other emotional disorders are often times shipped to out-of-state Residential Treatment Centers (RTC's), are likely to become emotionally disturbed adults, unemployable, and are likely to be involved in drugs, alcohol or other illegal activities.

WHY should you care?

Because this is a preventable disorder and will take the community working together!

"BECAUSE THIS IS YOUR HOME" !
