Letter for Teachers from Parents

With school starting soon, some of you want to communicate with your children's teachers about your child that has Attachment Disorder.

Nancy Thomas has created a letter just for teachers explaining things about Attachment Disorder and your child and has given permission to everyone to use it. On the internet type in Nancy Thomas, go down to Attachment Disorder/Nancy Thomas Parenting/Attachment.org. On the front page in the upper right hand corner hit Parent, the list is to your left, hit letter for teachers and print.

It is an overview of Attachment Disorder.

It explains that attachment disorder is most common in foster and adopted children, but can be found in many other so-called 'normal' families as well due to divorce, illness, or separations. Children whose parents are more involved in getting their next drug fix than they are in nurturing the developing child, the child learns that their needs are not primary to adults. In severe cases, where the child was an abuse, neglect, or violence victim, the child learns that adults are hurtful and cannot be trusted. Without therapy these children never develop the attachments to other human beings which teaches them to trust, accept discipline, develop cause-and-effect thinking, self-control, and responsibility for their own actions.

Left untreated, such children can maim, kill, and torture-without conscience or feeling. They can start fires, kill pets, and terrorize their families. They feel no remorse, have no conscience, and see no relation between their actions and what happens as a result.

In most cases, what a teacher sees at first is a charming and delightful child, seeking to hold the teachers hand, climbing into their laps, and smiling a lot. Give it a few months, then suddenly the child is defiant, moody, angry, and difficult to handle. There is no way to predict what will happen from one day to the next.

"Teachers, make it perfectly clear in your interactions with the child that "You are the boss of the classroom or activity". You are not the primary caregiver for this child. You cannot parent this child. You are his teacher-not his therapist-not his parents. Remind the child that her parents are where she can get hugs, cuddles, food and treats. You will only have responsibility for this child for one school year. Unless you maintain your role as teacher, this child will consider the move into the next grade as having you 'abandon' him".

Family life is terribly threatening to these children and what the parents have to deal with every day is nearly unimaginable to other uninformed adults. Blaming the family or failing to communicate with them adds to the dysfunction and puts the child at greater risk of never getting healthy.

Partners

AABA partners with several agencies and groups across the state. It's because of these partnerships that we are able to provide services year after year. Alaska Attachments & Bonding Associates (AABA) have been serving residents in the Mat Su since the 90s. AABA's work focuses on the impacts of the failure of children and adults to adequately attach and bond during the vulnerable years of development, 0-3. The resulting trauma can adversely impact a child's life.

AABA will be working together with Links on projects in the near future. Watch for trainings and other activities.

A WORD FROM Our CEO

It has come to my attention that some believe Coercive Therapy, better known as Holding Therapy, is still being used to treat children with Attachment Disorder. AABA does not condone this type of therapy! Additionally, the therapists listed on our web-site do not perform this therapy.

Parents, if you would like more information on Attachment Disorder and Therapies used, please come and check out our lending library. It is free and here for your use.

Thank you
